

Common Roots Farm

CSA share #13: week of September 2, 2019

It's Week #13 of our CSA venture to bring healthy food and beautiful flowers into your home! We hope you are enjoying our first season of providing you with fresh, nutritionally dense produce and our beautiful, organically grown flowers. We can feel the turn of seasons approaching here on the farm. Summer abundance is still with us, but the berries are showing us they have peaked and production is slowing down. As always, if you have comments for us, please let us hear from you at CSA@commonrootsfarm.org.

Today's farmer of the week is Jake, who has been coming to the farm since we began. Traveling here from Menlo Park weekly with his support staff person, Frank, Jake has been a trooper navigating our bumpy farm paths and provides us with incentive to make our farm more accessible. He and our farm dog, Summer, have a fond relationship. Jake enjoys helping to collect eggs and has been known to bring his favorite opera CDs to the farm to enjoy during the lunch break. We are glad to have Jake and Frank as part of our farm family. Besides, Jake probably loves our farm fresh tomatoes more than any of our farmers and that is just fine by us!

This week's CSA share includes a pint of strawberries, a mixed bouquet, dry farmed tomatoes, cherry tomatoes, butter lettuce, microgreens, and Blau Hilda pole beans. We hope you enjoy your farm share and invite you to offer any feedback or questions to us at: CSA@commonrootsfarm.org

Thank you!